Washington, April 27.—A low comedy was enacted in the house to-day by a disgraceful scene between Messrs. Foran of Ohio and O'Nell of Missouri.

The former sent to the clerk's desk to In this department, like all others, 'tis be read a newspaper clipping, to the crowded with all the very latest novelties effect that Mr. O'Nell had reported Mr. and wonderful bargains.

Foran saying that the question of the labor trouble could only be ended in blood.

O'Neil charged that Foran had used the ianguage attributed to him, and proved his statement by producing a copy of the reporter's notes of Foran's speech. He further averred that Foran had opposed everything in the labor committee that be, O'Nell, had advocated, and said that Foran was actuated by jealousy and disappointment in not securing the chairmanship of that committee, and was afflicted with a severe case of sorehead.

The language of both gentiemen was anything but choice, and the scene presented on the floor was the most exciting occurrence of this session. The members from both sides of the house
